Join to Promote Right to Information

- Free Media Movement

Even though the interest among Sri Lankan citizens on right to information is commendable after it has become a law, Free Media Movement believes that there are many steps to be taken in order to further promote right to information. We believe that not only the government, but also civil society and media organizations have a special responsibility in fulfilling this task.

In the context of worldwide commemoration of Right to Information Day, as Sri Lankans we should make efforts to expand it in to a wider citizens' movement of the country by making it more eloquent.

Free Media Movement has been struggling for nearly three decades, from emphasizing the need to the enactment of right to information law in Sri Lanka. Therefore, we highlight the fact that the entire media community of the country, including Free Media Movement and other media organizations have a special responsibility to achieve the above goal.
